

Corgi 310 Two White Corvettes

Posted by Keesie - 21 May 2020 11:00

---

More of the same, I did these many times before. Here a picture of a model I just finished next to all the parts to do another one.

---

Re: Corgi 301 Two White Corvettes

Posted by RoutemasterNL - 21 May 2020 11:36

---

Is there some red paint on the base or is it just the reflection of your Mustang?

And did you use the "Action" white paint?

---

Re: Corgi 310 Two White Corvettes

Posted by Keesie - 21 May 2020 12:42

---

Very good Theo!

I left traces of maroon red on the base, and it shines through the gray primer, which was then given ca clear coat. Normally I would think I did something wrong, but it is on the base, on both, and a somewhat nice effect. To be continued when I have finished the second one.

---

=====

Re: Corgi 310 Two White Corvettes

Posted by Keesie - 21 May 2020 13:16

---

No Mustang-red, picture from the work bench. Yes, Action paint, 2 euros a bottle.

=====

Re: Corgi 310 Two White Corvettes

Posted by RoutemasterNL - 22 May 2020 09:56

---

OK. I have tried that white paint, but am not satisfied by it because in my opinion it is too thin. And therefore I only use Motip white, which is more expensive, but it does the job better in my opinion.

=====

Re: Corgi 310 Two White Corvettes

Posted by Keesie - 22 May 2020 10:50

---

Well, I always try to do the models with means as cheap as possible, of course with the same result as more expensive methods. I would have to BUY Motip or any other more expensive paint, I had to sell the models more expensive too. Of course I also have Motip-white, which I actually bought for .....2 euros. Sheer quality is not really a standard, as what is satisfying for you, is maybe not for me or vice versa.

Anyway, most Action paints are indeed thin, but doing several layers I don't think it turned out bad on these Corvettes.

Here the additional pictures, as I finished the second model. The Corvette is one of the only car-models Corgi did with thick inside stands, so I could use rivets.

five nights at freddy's wallpaper

---

Re: Corgi 310 Two White Corvettes

Posted by Keesie - 22 May 2020 10:52

---

As I said, both bases have traces of red remains.

lightning 1080

=====