Very nicely done. Looks great as a race car. You must have a great store of front and rear bumpers for the cars you do, among other parts I am sure. What do you do with them?

Thanks

Yes I have more bumpers than cars, once I sold bunch of them with other parts on ebay

I would think you would label them or put them in a bag for each car and label that. I am sure there are restorers and modifiers like you that could use items you do not use. I used to have a buddy in Florida. He has since passed away years ago now but he was a member here. He would customize plastic kits like Revell, and all the others and have loads of parts left over. He told me he made a good dollar from time to time selling bag lots of parts on eBay. He also traded for items he needed for his models and others that he did for friends and customers.
